

Crafting with Recycled Materials!

Refuse, Reduce, Reuse, Recycle!

There are all kinds of crafts you can make around your house using things that you probably throw away all the time!

One thing we all throw away regularly is the tiny cardboard tube that comes inside every roll of toilet paper or paper towels. People are making all kinds of stuff out of these tubes nowadays, everything from characters and toys to bracelets and phone holders. Sometimes, we throw away old clothes, either because they don't fit anymore or because they've gotten stained or ruined somehow. But there are lots of things we can make out of clothes that are no longer wearable. Before throwing away any type of old clothing or fabric, think about whether or not you could recycle and reuse that material in a different way!

Another type of bag you can make out of an old t-shirt is a produce bag for the supermarket! This is an awesome reusable craft because it makes use of an old t-shirt AND helps you save the plastic next time you buy fruits or vegetables!

Maybe somebody in your house receives their medication in one of those see-through orange pill bottles. Every time the pharmacy gives you a new bottle, it might seem like there's no use in keeping that old pill bottle. Before you throw these away, consider all of the things you can make using an old pill bottle, like a tiny first-aid kit or bobby pin case! Every Girl Scout needs her own First Aid Kit!

This is a great kit to start out with, and girls can fill it with whatever is already available to them! Some items that would be perfect for a pill bottle first aid kit are band-aids, alcohol wipes, cotton swabs or balls, healing ointment, or one or two Benadryl or Tylenol in case of emergencies.
